7. SCOPE OF WORK

INTRODUCTION

The South African Institute of Chartered Accountants (SAICA) is South Africa's pre-eminent accountancy body which is widely recognised as one of the world's leading accounting institutes. The Institute provides a wide range of support services to more than 46 000 members and associate members. The Institute also provides support to pre-qualification students and trainees on their journey to becoming a member.

One of SAICA's primary goals is to contribute towards strengthening the country's economy by playing a significant and leading role in transformation and skills development.

The Thuthuka Education Upliftment Fund (TEUF), launched the Thuthuka Bursary (Thuthuka) in the Eastern Cape in 2002, a pioneering initiative to promote transformation in the profession and is, today, a well-established successful national transformation initiative.

Thuthuka's objective is to transform the demographics of the profession to reflect those of the country in terms of race and gender, and provide educational support to African learners and students for the benefit of the profession, while simultaneously helping to uplift communities. SAICA prides itself in leading the chartered accountancy profession as a socially responsible driver of business and skills development by supporting and encouraging education and other development initiatives.

8. OVERVIEW OF THE REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

In 2022, Thuthuka will celebrate its 20-year anniversary. In celebration of this auspicious occasion SAICA will be documenting the Thuthuka story in a book that tells the history of Thuthuka from then to now.

8.1 Invitation to Service Providers

SAICA invites all interested parties to submit a written response to this Request for Proposal (RFP). This RFP is being sought strictly for the purpose of gaining knowledge of services and supplies available with an estimate of their corresponding costs and should not be construed as intent, commitment, or promise to acquire services or solutions offered. Information submitted in response to this RFP will become the property of SAICA. SAICA is not obliged to contract or pay for any information herein requested nor is it liable for any costs incurred by any supplier.

Service providers can submit proposals to all components contained in section 3 of this document or a specific component in which they have expertise,

8.2 Project Overview

SAICA's overall objective is to showcase the immense work it has undertaken in its efforts to truly transform the chartered accountancy profession over the 20 years of Thuthuka's existence.

8.3A brief history of SAICA's transformation efforts

These efforts began in the 80s at a time when our country stood poised on the brink of impending civil war. It was a decision that took both a great amount of foresight as well as strong nerve as we contemplated what it would take to truly become transformed.

Leading SAICA at the time was Executive Director Kenneth Gordon Mockler. It was Mockler who put SAICA's transformation agenda on the map when he articulated that SAICA's three-part objective was to "encourage collegiality; involve all societies in the institute; [and] maintain exceptional standards."

The first and third objective were relatively easy.

The matter of opening up the profession to all races, however, was a different story. After all, this had to be done without lowering standards in any way. This is something that particularly worried SAICA as the state of education in the institutions black people were allowed to attend was vastly inferior to the education on offer for their white counterparts. Not only this, but with the first black CA(SA) Professor Wiseman Nkuhlu only gaining the designation in 1977, SAICA's track record in this area was virtually non-existent. (Indeed, our history book reveals that in the 80s SAICA didn't track its membership breakdown in terms of race - although it is a widely held assumption that these numbers stood at one black and 11 Indian CAs(SA).)

Since the profession recognised the need to open the doors to more black and female CAs(SA), it established a committee, under the chairmanship of the late Brian Hawksworth, to promote this initiative.

Then came the first watershed moment.

In 1987, SAICA, together with the then Public Accountants and Auditors Board (now IRBA), and the Association for the Advancement of Black Accountants (ABASA), established the Eden Trust to provide bursaries to aspiring black CAs(SA). Thanks to funding, which came from the auditing firms, the Eden Trust managed to help over 100 black accountants qualify. An admirable feat when you consider that it takes a minimum of seven years to complete the CA(SA) qualification journey.

Well-meaning as it was, the Trust did not, however, solve the basic problem of access to quality education.

SAICA realised that if it was to achieve its goal of a demographically representative membership base, it would need to tackle both funding constraints as well as the host of academic and psycho-social barriers that black candidates faced in attempting to enter the profession.

The arrival of democracy in 1994 compounded the profession's transformation concerns

With the dawn of a new country, there was an ever more pressing need to create an integrated economy capable to supporting not just a privileged majority but an entire nation. The problem, however, was that as a result of South Africa's past, the country not only had a poorly educated majority but it was facing an acute shortage of scarce-skilled professionals – CAs(SA) included.

Faced with the very real threat that the country would not have enough CAs(SA), SAICA decided that it was duty-bound to make a contribution. And so it turned its efforts to not only funding more black aspiring CAs(SA), it took on the challenge of addressing the problem of access to quality education.

Two members rose to this challenge in spectacular style.

The first is businessman Sizwe Nxasana [CA(SA)] who was drawn to this cause after expressing criticism on the profession's lack of commitment to transformation. The second is SAICA's own Chantyl Mulder [CA(SA)] who had made it her life's work to open access to the profession for the 90% of the population who had previously been denied it.

It was under their watchful eye and intense involvement that SAICA launched its transformation efforts in the Eastern Cape in 2002, supported by the then SAICA CEO Ignatius Sehoole.

Under the banner of Thuthuka, a Zulu word meaning "to develop", SAICA has grown its transformation efforts from this single project into a national project that includes various interventions across the education value chain in order to provide educational support to African learners and students for the benefit of the profession.

In 2005, Thuthuka went one step further. It dissolved the Eden Trust, reinvented it (so as to include a comprehensive wrap-around support programme that supports students' psycho-social, additional academic and life-skills needs) and relaunched it as the now world-renowned Thuthuka Bursary Fund.

Just ten short years later, the World Bank recognised SAICA for its efforts to transform the profession through Thuthuka, as well as for upholding high standards in accounting and financial reporting in South Africa.

In its 2014 report on South Africa's regulatory system, the World Bank commended the bursary programme as a 'world first'. Titled Coverage of Standards and Codes: Accounting and Auditing, the report lauded SAICA for having 'taken decisive steps to transform the profession'.

So it is no surprise then that when the Department of Higher Education launched its Ministerial Task Team to look into the plight of South Africa's missing middle, it turned to the same champions for guidance and support.

That support came in the form of a pilot programme modelled on SAICA's highly effective Thuthuka Bursary Fund. Today, the Ikusasa Student Financial Aid Programme (ISFAP), which Nxasana chairs and Mulder acts as co-CEO, has given more than 1 800 students the chance to attend one of 12 partner institutions of higher education to complete a tertiary degree leading to a career in one of the 11 Occupations of High Demand, including chartered accountancy. The Human Resource Development Council deems this programme crucial to uplift and strengthen the future of the South African economy.

8.4 Looking ahead

A further significant milestone towards ramping up our transformation took place last year when the profession marked the momentous occasion of accrediting the final of South Africa's six historically disadvantaged institutions (HDI) so that they can produce CAs(SA).

Since the only way to change the plight of the country's poorest citizens is to improve the standard of education available so as to minimise the impact of the triple challenges of poverty, unemployment and inequality, this achievement marks years of hard work and determination by SAICA and its University partners to level our country's grossly uneven educational playing field.

8.5 What is Thuthuka?

As a critical stakeholder in society, SAICA has undertaken the responsibility of ensuring that the economy has a consistent flow of adequately and suitably qualified accounting professionals who are representative of the country's demographics.

Fulfilling this mission of creating a pipeline of CAs(SA) requires various skills development initiatives at primary, high school and tertiary education level. To drive this process and ensure its proper governance, SAICA established Thuthuka in 2002 to sustain the future of the chartered accountancy profession and transform its demographics by:

- advancing education;
- empowering the youth; and
- sustaining the future of the chartered accountancy profession

Through Thuthuka, SAICA has undertaken the responsibility of ensuring that there is a consistent flow into the economy of adequately and suitably qualified accounting professionals who are representative of the country's racial demographics. This is done via various skills development initiatives at a primary, high school and tertiary education level.

Composed of two parts, the TEUF offers education-related and community-based projects to learners and educators from previously disadvantaged backgrounds in order to encourage learners at high school to take mathematics as a subject and to better the pass rate of this key gateway subject. Made up of a selection of critical education upliftment programmes, implemented nationally, each TEUF programme is a stepping stone towards transforming the accountancy profession and addressing, amongst other key issues, the lack of literacy and numeracy skills of African and coloured learners entering higher education institutions.

Thuthuka also identifies the most gifted maths learners so that they can apply for a Thuthuka Bursary (which accepted its first cohort in 2005). The Thuthuka Bursary is strategically positioned as part of a solution to the nation's transformation needs in skills development by giving disadvantaged African and Coloured learners the opportunity to study at one of 11 SAICA accredited universities across the country towards becoming chartered accountants (CAs[SA]).

19. FORCE MAJEURE

19.1. If either Party is prevented or restricted directly or indirectly from carrying out all or any of its obligations under the Contract by any cause beyond the reasonable control of that Party, including, without limitations, acts of God, civil commotion, riots, insurrection, acts of government, fire, explosion, the elements, epidemics, governmental embargoes, cyber-attack, lack of access to essential resources, or like causes ("force majeure"), the Party so affected shall, to the extent so prevented, be relieved of its obligations hereunder during the period of such events and shall not be liable for any delay or failure in the performance of any obligations hereunder or loss or damage either general, special or consequential which the other Party may suffer due to or resulting from such delay or failure; provided always that written notice of the occurrence constituting force majeure shall be given within 1 (one) Calendar Day by the affected Party.

19.2. The Parties agree that should a force majeure event last more than 10 (ten) Calendar Days, the Party who has not invoked force majeure to excuse any non-performance of its obligations may terminate the Contract by giving 5 (five) Calendar Days written notice to the other Party.
